

Deep neural networks are popular because they are in many cases the most accurate parametric machine learning models for a given task, like image classification. This is largely due to the way they represent data. Deep neural networks have many layers (hence the “deep”), which induces the model to learn layered representations of input data. This layered